The past meets the present—and the law is our soundtrack. Just as the '70s, '80s, and '90s each defined an era in culture with disco lights, neon vibes, and grunge guitars, today's legal landscape is shaped by shifting precedents, new technologies, and evolving challenges. From the courtroom drama of the '70s that could rival The Godfather, to the bold arguments of the '80s that belong in an episode of L.A. Law, to the transformative cases of the '90s echoing through like a scene from A Few Good Men, the issues we face today demand creativity, resilience and adaptability. Together, we'll rewind through decades of style and sound while fast-forwarding into the most pressing questions of modern practice—because whether it's "Stayin' Alive," "Don't Stop Believin'," or knowing "You Can't Handle the Truth," the law, like pop culture, always keeps us on our toes. Just as each decade left its mark on music, film and television, so too has the law evolved—requiring us to revisit the past, stay alert to the present and prepare for the cases that will define the future. Like mixtapes, statutes and court rulings—we're here to remix the decades into lessons for today.

Judgment Day or Just Another Tool? The Future of AI in the Law, Hospitality, and Retail

This panel will explore how artificial intelligence is transforming the legal, hospitality, and retail sectors, separating real disruption from science fiction. The discussion will examine today's AI tools as tomorrow's potential competitive advantage, while addressing the real life, rather than dystopian future, concerns. Panelists will address practical legal risks, operational challenges, and strategic opportunities, asking the central question: is AI a runaway machine, or a system that can be programmed to work for you?

Combating Life Care Plans

"You've got to know the rules before you can break 'em.

Otherwise, it's no fun."—Sonney Crockett (Miami Vice)

Life care plans are no longer confined to catastrophic loss claims and are being seen in increasing frequency, as an easy way for plaintiff's counsels to substantially increase claimed economic damages with minimal proportional investment. Knowing the 'rules' is the key to combating these plans. Methodology matters, and life care planners have some common methods for creating opinions, which could substantially increase the exposure value of even minor claims. Learning the common methodology can become a powerful tool for understanding the industry of life care planning and its use to inflate future economic damages. Join us in a panel and group discussion over life care planning methodology, its application in the world of expert admissibility and contribute to a discussion on tips and tricks for combating life care plans.

Somebody's Watchin' Me—Surveillance in Litigation and the Workplace

These days, personal injury plaintiffs likely aren't just singing along—they might be under spotlight. But do your employees have that same watchin' me feeling? From old-school stakeouts to cutting edge technology, surveillance has become both a powerful resource and a potential pitfall in personal injury litigation and beyond. This panel will explore the strategic, evidentiary and ethical considerations attorneys must navigate when using surveillance, while also addressing the growing legal and privacy concerns surrounding employee monitoring. Along the way we will shine a light on emerging technologies and standards that shape how surveillance is conducted—and the impact it can have on both your case and workplace.

"Back to the Future" to Create a Healthy Company Culture

Lawyers often believe they have all "The Right Stuff," are the "Top Gun" and are "Tuff Enuff" to practice on the highway to "The Danger Zone" in order to be successful. Or maybe they are simply a "Material Girl" or want "Money for Nothing." Regardless, the legal profession can test one's emotional and mental endurance, make it difficult to maintain balanced living and lead to depression, anxiety, substance abuse, burnout and even suicidality. Relationships with colleagues and clients, adherence to ethical standards and licenses to practice may be casualties along the way. If you could go "Back to the Future" and have a better understanding of the way "One Thing Leads to Another" do you know how you would coach your colleague or be coached yourself to "Change Your Ways?" This session will be an open discussion of about how to create an environment where the well-being of attorneys in a law firm or legal department is a priority and self-destructive practices are recognized and dealt with before anyone crashes and burns. We hope that by the end of the session you will feel like "Putting on the Ritz" or heading directly to the "Love Shack." Your firm's future is a matter of choice. "Don't Worry, Be Happy!"

The Sting of Strategy: Quick Legal Tips for Maximum Impact

This presentation explores how in-house legal professionals can adopt the clever tactics and strategic thinking seen in the classic movie The Sting to navigate corporate/carrier legal challenges effectively. Just as con artists in the film use precision, patience and foresight to execute their plans, in-house professionals can apply similar principles --anticipating issues, staying one step ahead and executing decisive legal moves that protect and benefit the organization. Attendees will walk away with actionable insights on negotiation tactics, risk management strategies and ways to deliver legal solutions with impact, all while maintaining the strategic mindset that ensures long-term success.

Avoiding Disaster—Defending Catastrophic Injury Claims

The Decade of the '70s was the "Golden Age" of disaster movies. From the heights of the Towering Inferno to the depths of the Poseidon Adventure, there was not a catastrophe that was overlooked. In that vein, we will discuss the complex and high-stakes world of defending catastrophic injury claims both pre-suit and during active litigation. These cases often involve severe physical and emotional consequences to the injured persons and concurrent economic losses. Defendants must be prepared to expect emotional impact on juries and the strategic challenges presented by the sympathetic plaintiff.

This session will cover:

- Understanding the Nature of Catastrophic Injuries
- Developing a Strategic Defense During Pre- Suit Investigation and Litigation
- Managing the Human Element presented by the injured plaintiff and the effect on a jury—and "survive" the claim through verdict.

The Happy Days and Good Times?

The 1970s seem like they were easy time. You didn't have to comb your hair to look fashionable. You could wear huge comfortable pants and whatever jewelry you wanted. And to get big laughs, all you needed to do was shout "Dyn-o-mite!" Well times have changed, whether it be for good, bad and or somewhere in between.

Regardless of where along the political spectrum you may lie, there is one thing that we all can agree on, current geopolitical issues are greatly affecting the hospitality and retail sector. The kicker, there is not a lot of guidance on how companies are supposed to navigate ever-changing rules and social conditions, especially as it pertains to how to interact with ICE, political and social instability and various employment issues. Please join us for an apolitical discussion on the various issues the H&R sector is facing to learn best practices and tips to take back to your respective companies and firms.
